

Pint Shop was inspired by the beer houses of the 1830's, it is an exciting and original concept - it includes traditional core values with an exciting new catering offer which utilises traditional cooking methods.

The founders of Pint Shop contacted Vision having worked with them at their previous employers and wished for Vision to be involved in their new concept.

The project included restrictions from a mechanical and electrical perspective as there was a limited amount of electric and gas available and this necessitated a fine balance between the gas and electric equipment selected. All equipment selected had to be carefully checked to ensure that it was within the M&E limitations whilst also adhering to the client's desired concept of traditional cooking methods. Vision supplied energy efficient equipment and were also able to help source some bespoke, specialist items such as a combined Robata grill with a rotisserie on the alternate side. Vision's creative thinking allowed the delivery of the project in keeping with the client's original concept.

The kitchen itself was located on the first floor of an old building and access to it was via a narrow, angled staircase. Therefore, all equipment had to be selected or manufactured with this limited access in mind. The install itself took place over a phased programme working with the Main Contractor and all dates had to be hit regardless of access issues so as to not hinder the overall programme. Full and detailed client training was undertaken and as a lot of the equipment was either new to market, specialised or bespoke, Vision arranged for specialist personnel to deliver the training.

Vision's work at Pint Shop was to deliver a completed redesign which matched the client's concept and was viable in terms of the space on offer whilst overcoming the issues with access and M&E limitations. With some innovative thinking and organisation of space all issues were overcome and the project was completed in accordance with the client's expectations.

Vision Commercial Kitchens have been nothing but professional in their approach to the delivery of the kitchen facilities at Pint Shop. Vision are a refreshing company to work with due to their 'can do', proactive and innovative attitude. There is never a problem, only solutions.

Vision worked in extremely tough site conditions with restricted access to our first floor kitchen. Health and Safety had to be managed extremely carefully and Vision did this whilst upholding their commitments and meeting the strict deadline that had been set.
